

America on Wheels Announces a Special Feature Exhibit: GM's 1995 Riviera Concept Convertible

Allentown, PA -- America on Wheels Museum is pleased to announce, in addition to its current exhibition, a six-month opportunity for guests to view Buick's 1995 Riviera Concept Convertible; a car with a mysterious past, an alluring history for any autophile.

The vehicle had been converted into a convertible by Coach Builders Limited in Florida. Rumors and hints about its history swirled in auto collectors' circles for years, but remember: the truth is usually far removed from the fantasy. What is fact is the automobile itself, with under 3,000 miles, purported to be a "dark cherry metallic" with taupe interior, and 17-inch wheels. Its last private owner donated it to BHA who is loaning it to the AOW. Guests will be able to view the car beginning in mid-July.

According to an article in the car magazine The Riview (sic) written by the previous owner, Len Woelfel, he had been searching for an example of the concept car when he found it listed on eBay. It had been owned by someone who supplied vehicles to the entertainment industry.

America on Wheels is a unique family destination, with hands-on and educational exhibits for children, trips through Memory Lane for adults, and a close-up introduction to vehicles of all kinds for everyone. People who love autos in general will love the displays, and there is, of course, an excellent gift shop to satisfy every kind of visitor.

America On Wheels' mission, as a transportation museum, is to educate and entertain children and adults and preserve the historical, social, and cultural impact of our nation's over-the-road transportation systems, while contributing to the revitalization of its community. www.AmericaOnWheels.org
